Introduction

Inbox Protect can operate as a silent service to allow an assessment and review to take place before implementing the fully operational system.

When operating in this mode, all reporting to account administrators functions as expected and demonstrate the statistics as though the product is active. From a user's perspective, no change takes place.

What does this provide to administrators?

Administrators will view the Topsec portal as though the system is fully active, which includes the following:

Note: where retrospective, search, and quarantined are mentioned below, no email will have been removed at any point, as the system is purely for demonstration purposes. Any action taken will present as though it is successful but will not make any changes to the tenant/user.

- Internal and External Message History of the Tenant.
- View emails quarantined with full analysis and management options.
- Submit the quarantined attachments to sandbox.
- Search and remove emails across the tenant.
- View emails deleted retrospectively (Including the offending URL)
- Run full reports

Advantages of using Silent Mode:

- Perform a full review of results over a specific timeframe.
- Side by side comparison when running alongside any competitor service.
- Side by side comparison when running alongside 365.
- No interruption to users or training required.
- No requirement to perform release actions while reviewing.
- Simple to activate and upgrade to full version.

How is 'Silent Mode' setup?

Identical setup to the full version of Inbox Protect.

Topsec's support staff apply a change to the portal account before activation to place it into 'Silent Mode'. Likewise, our support team will amend the account to a live status, should you choose to proceed with the service. With 'Silent Mode' in place, no further technical setup is required.

What doesn't 'Silent Mode' include?

- URLs will not be re-written.
- Emails will not be Quarantined.
- Retrospective emails will not be deleted.
- Policy and Rules will not apply to the tenant.
